Funeral of Mrs. Paxman Social for Raymond's

Funeral Services of the late Kate Love Paxman, held Friday Aug. 21st at 2 p.m. in the Second Ward Chapel. The opening song sung by the choir was "How Firm a Foundation."

Prayer being offered by Pres. H. S. Allen and the second song "Oh My Father."

Bishop J. Walker presided. He tendered sympathy to the family, also expressed his and the families appreciation for assistance rendered during her illness and for the lovely floral offerings.

First speaker was Mrs. Maydell Palmer who had come from the same home town of Nephi Utah. Mrs. Palmer had known and loved Mrs. Paxman from her earliest childhood, paid splendid tribute to her life of courage and undaunted faith, and first knew her when she was Stake President of the Relief Society. She had been a President of the Y.L.M.I.A. a Sunday School Teacher, and a missionary to New Zealand with her husband. Being a woman of culture and refinement she was a lover of good books. The speaker read a poem called "Life" which she said expressed the sentiments of the deceased.

A. J. Mercer of Magrath was the next speaker, and referred to his business dealings with husband of deceased and paid a high tribute to him and also to his loving wife.

Mrs. Emma Burr sang a favorite of the deceased, "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer."

J. W. Evans of the Stake Presidency was the next speaker, but he gave his time to Elder Richard R. Lyman of the Council of the Twelve who was present. Elder Lyman said he would gladly have gone the ninety miles from Salt Lake City to Nephi to attend this funeral, and felt grateful for the privilege of paying a tribute to Wm. Paxman who had been such an inspiration to him in his youth and whose memory he would always revere. He had known the family well and said that deceased had proven a true wife and faithful companion amidst all her trials.

Wm. Clark sang "I Know that My Redeemer Lives."

The closing song by the Choir was "Come, Come, Ye Saints," and the closing prayer was offered by P. J. Christensen a long time friend.

Christensen Bros. had charge of the arrangements and John F. Salmon dedicated the grave.

At the graveside were: Ezra and Douglas, two sons, C. F. Tollestrup, nephews Bud and Bert Love and grandson Marion.

A very touching scene at the cemetery was the farewell expression of affection of her blind, deaf and mute brother George Love, for whom she has cared for years.

BALANCING OUR BUDGET

Governments either and you are making the question of a balanced budget more vexatious this year than ever before, and from present indications this same condition will apply very forcibly to all individuals in western Canada this fall.

Luckily or unluckily, for better or worse, we have grown up with the idea of a settlement after threshing. Ordinarily the wheat farmer has from five to ten or even twenty-five thousand dollars in cash after the harvest to pass around and square up bank accounts, machine accounts and store bills. This year if the average farmer has one dollar where he generally has fifty he will be lucky. Prices are so low coupled with the light yield that the total returns are going to be small.

What attitude will the individual take with his returns and their disposition is the question. Of course the first consideration is living for the family and the ones immediately dependent. This situation must be met as everyone will agree. How much of the winter's living has been produced on the farm and how much outside of a grist of flour and a bin full of coal will it require. And then if there remains a few hundred dollars to apply on debts how will it be distributed?

We do not know the sentiment of the individuals in this matter. It appears that the only fair and square way is to determine how much is available total up the outstanding accounts and divide it pro rata amongst all who have assisted you. The store man needs some, the machine men need some, the banker needs some, and probably you owe some taxes that need paying. If every debt can be met well and good. If not, everyone should be remembered, and all possible should be paid. The business men have aided in times of stress and they certainly should be remembered. They have their troubles, and spend many hours trying to scheme and plan so that they can carry on, rendering service and accommodating the public as much as possible, and surely they should all be remembered.

And another thing, in view of the present condition it seems that we should all practice economy. In planning our winter needs don't be a bit more extravagant than is absolutely necessary. Recreation is essential, good clothes is needful, good food must be provided. But where finances are limited, and in most cases they are, old-fashioned good judgment and good hard sense should be used.

If people will do their best, that all that can be expected, and everyone will be obliged to be satisfied. The people who cause the trouble are the ones who make a lot of faithful promises and straightway forget them after they have obtained the thing for which they begged so hard.

Let everyone make up their minds to play the game fair and treat every one with honesty and justice. None of us can do more than that, and in the face of the present situation, no one should do less. We owe it to ourselves and the community in which we live to do at least this.

CUTTING THE COST

BETTER BULLS WILL LOWER MILK PRODUCTION COSTS

(From Blue Valley Bulletin, July 31)

Higher milk production per cow is needed on many more farms, not as a means for increasing the total supply of milk and cream going to market, but as a way to meet present demands for dairy products more economically with fewer cows, the experiences of successful dairy farmers show. They find that right feeding and good care are necessary for highest and most profitable production from a dairy herd. But along with this good management is the need for cows capable of producing more than average amounts of milk before much headway can be made in increasing income.

Ability to produce milk is an inherited characteristic just as much as is the color of a cow's coat. Therefore, breeding plays a most important part in every farmer's plan for building a more profitable dairy herd. There is an old saying that "the bull is half the herd." From the standpoint of increasing the income from dairy cows, he is even more than that, for an inferior bull can pull down the milk production and income of any herd very rapidly. Progressive dairy farmers have learned the way they can increase their income from cows most economically is to use only a good purebred bull from high producing stock, and then use this bull's most promising heifer offspring to build up the herd.

What's a Good Bull Worth
The money value of good dairy bulls is shown by a survey made on 577 New Jersey farms. In this survey a careful record was made of the income each farmer received for his labor after deducting all cash expenses of the farm, changes in inventory, interest on all farm capital invested, and unpaid family labor other than that of the farmer himself. In other words, the farmer's labor income represents what the farmer received for his work for the year.

It was found that on these 577 New Jersey farms that those farmers who used scrub bulls had an average yearly labor income of only $198, while those who used a grade bull received $404 for their work. However, on farms where only purebred dairy bulls were used, the labor income per farm jumped to an average of $799, or over four times that received by farmers who used a scrub sire, and nearly twice as much as that received by the grade bull users.

This survey also included many records of farmers covering a period of 5 to 10 years, which showed that on those farms where purebred dairy bulls were used during all this time that the labor income per farm was $1,102, while on those farms using scrub bulls, there was an actual loss every year which averaged $243. In other words, those farmers who used scrub bulls actually paid $243 each year for the privilege of milking a bunch of scrub cows and doing their other farm work.

Further evidence of the progress that can be expected from the use of good purebred dairy bulls are the results of an experiment at the Iowa agricultural experiment station, in which scrub cows with an average yearly production of 182.4 pounds of butterfat were mated with purebred dairy bulls. Production records kept on the daughters of this cross, showed that the average production of these half-purebred cows was 261.9 pounds of butterfat. These daughters were then bred to good purebred dairy bulls and records of their heifer offspring showed that these three-quarter purebred granddaughters of the original scrub cows made an average yearly production of 375.8 pounds of butterfat. The use of good bulls, therefore, resulted in the granddaughter more than doubling the production of their scrub grand-dams.

In small dairy herds, it may not pay to buy and keep a good dairy bull. However, many farmers get around this difficulty by sharing in the purchase price of a desirable bull. The each take turns in keeping him. In this way they all get the use of a good bull at a price no greater than each would have to pay for an inferior animal. Where such an arrangement cannot be made it pays to use the services of a good bull. Other farmers with small herds have acquired an excellent sire by buying him at a comparatively low price as a present for their dairy bull calf from good producing stock.—Cream Producer.

WHEAT SO CHEAP
BURN AS COAL

WASHINGTON FARMERS EN-QUIRE FOR GRATES WHICH WILL MAKE STOVES BURN IT

With the local mines working only one day a week, a new menace is threatening the coal market. Wheat at 30 cents a bushel makes it worth $10 per ton. While few Southern Alberta points may pay that much for Alberta coal, in Saskatchewan many pay that amount or more. Will wheat be used in those areas instead of coal? If so, will it give as good results in heat?

The question arises as a result of a threat by Washington state farmers to burn wheat instead of coal. A Spokane paper says:—
Farmers in eastern Washington are considering burning wheat for fuel this winter.

This assumption is gained from a letter received yesterday by Myer S. Rubens of the Rubens stove and furnace repair works, 11009 First Avenue. The letter received from one of his customers at Winona said:—
"Some of our customers are planning to burn wheat for fuel this winter. What have you to offer for grates for coal heaters and furnaces? Any suggestions you may have to offer for burning wheat as fuel will be greatly appreciated."

Mr. Rubens was a little surprised at the request but by no means non-plused, as he says he can fix up a wheat grate without any trouble. He didn't go into details.—Lethbridge Herald.

If it stands on its hind legs, but has a pipe in its mouth, it is not a squirrel.

On the other hand, if it does not wear a vest, necktie, mustache or hat and doesn't smoke a pipe, it is probably a cow.

Truth to tell, the most we ever bagged on a huntin' trip was our trousers.

VITAMINS

Whatever is new, naturally attracts a great deal of attention and that is one reason why you read and hear so much about vitamins. That is not, however, the reason for this article. It is because vitamins are of importance to the health and well-being of each and everyone of us that it is necessary for our own good that we be informed concerning them.

For many years it has been known that our foods contain fats, proteins, carbohydrates and minerals. It was generally understood that the value of a diet depended entirely on the quantity and quality of the ingredients. These substances are just as important as they ever were and if our bodies are to be kept well nourished they must receive a sufficient supply of them.

During recent years however, it has been discovered that there is something else needed to complete the diet. There are other constituents of foods which must also be present in sufficient quantity if the body is to be kept strong and healthy. These newer substances are called vitamins.

From all that is written about vitamins, it might be supposed that a great deal is known about them, whereas the truth is that we know comparatively little. What we do know is not only interesting but it is sufficient to make it perfectly clear that the growth of the body and the keeping of the body in a state of health demand vitamins.

There are several different vitamins. If they are not present in the food consumed then such diseases as scurvy and rickets develop. They are called deficiency diseases as they occur when the diet is deficient in vitamins. If the vitamins are only partially lacking, while the deficiency diseases do not occur, proper growth and development do not take place; the body is not healthy and it more readily falls a victim to infection.

The vitamins are present in many foods, but in varying amounts. The average person can rely upon milk and dairy products, eggs, green, leafy vegetables, fresh fruits, tomatoes (raw or canned) and whole grain cereals to supply him with all the vitamins he requires.

A sufficiency of vitamins is a matter of real importance. It is fortunate that if the mentioned foods are used regularly and freely in the diet, one does not need to worry about the question of vitamins.

From what has been said, it is evident that the person who lives chiefly on sweets and starchy foods is almost sure to suffer. This does not mean that sweets and starches are harmful—indeed they are not. They should be used, but not to the exclusion of other foods. Eat a wide variety of foods is safe advice to follow.

Night Taxi Driver (shifting into high): "My gosh. What a clutch!"
Voice from rear seat: "Say, you, keep your eyes on the road. This is none of your business."

The journey by a local train was slow and dreary and one passenger, a motorist, was impatient at the many stops. Finally he spoke to the guard: "Good heavens," he said, "can't you go faster than this?"

"Och, yes sirr. But I must stay with the train, sir."

"The cat swallowed a tin of ear-hide."

"What happened?"

"It had a set-to-lean kittens."

"Did you see the terrible collision on this corner yesterday?"

"No. What caused it?"

"Oh the same old competitive spirit."

"Does your wife like to read fiction?"

"Does she? Why she just eats up the automobile ads which tell about what the new models will do."

POULTRY CULLING

(Experimental Farms Note)

The farm flock should be carefully and systematically culled every year. The Experimental Farm, Indian Head, Sask., recommends the following in regard to culling.

Culling should be done in July or August when poor producers have generally ceased to lay. Additional room will also be required at this time for the pullets.

It trap nests have been used and records of all birds kept, culling, from the production angle, will be a simple matter. Where no individual records are available it will be necessary to observe the physical characters which indicate production or non-production in the hen.

The purpose of culling, in general, is to improve the type and average production of the flock. It is therefore necessary to know the breed characteristics as well as the characteristics of production before starting to eliminate any individuals from the flock. One should have, at all times, a picture of the ideal in his mind. Eye but should be careful that production is not sacrificed for unnecessary "style" or "fanciness" of type or plumage.

Features in regard to breed-type which should be considered as important in the farm flock are, — size and weight for breed, general plumage color or type of comb, color of legs and type of legs for breed (bare or feathered, etc.).

From the production standpoint, a good layer may be recognized by the following characters: A fine, clean-cut head, showing a bright, prominent, alert eye; comb and wattles having a turgid, waxy appearance, usually bright red in color. Capacity for egg-production is shown by a wedge-shaped body, having good length, depth and width, with the width carried well back over the hips without tapering toward the tail. Such a body provides room for large amounts of feed and for egg development. The bones in the rear part of abdomen should be well apart and flexible to the touch.

Birds which should be culled are, — old hens, hens which are early moulters, badly off-type individuals, those with narrow, crowlike heads, meaty heads, sunken eyes, shrivelled combs, wrinkled skin, narrow and shallow bodies, or tall and upstanding individuals.

DOMINION WILL PUSH HIGHWAY

Ottawa, Aug. 17. — In the relief of unemployment throughout Canada, the government is faced with its greatest immediate problem and to its solution continuous effort is now being directed. A cabinet council in progress this afternoon here, is considering the regulation which will govern the subject generally, particularly the co-operative measures between the Dominion, the provinces and the municipalities.

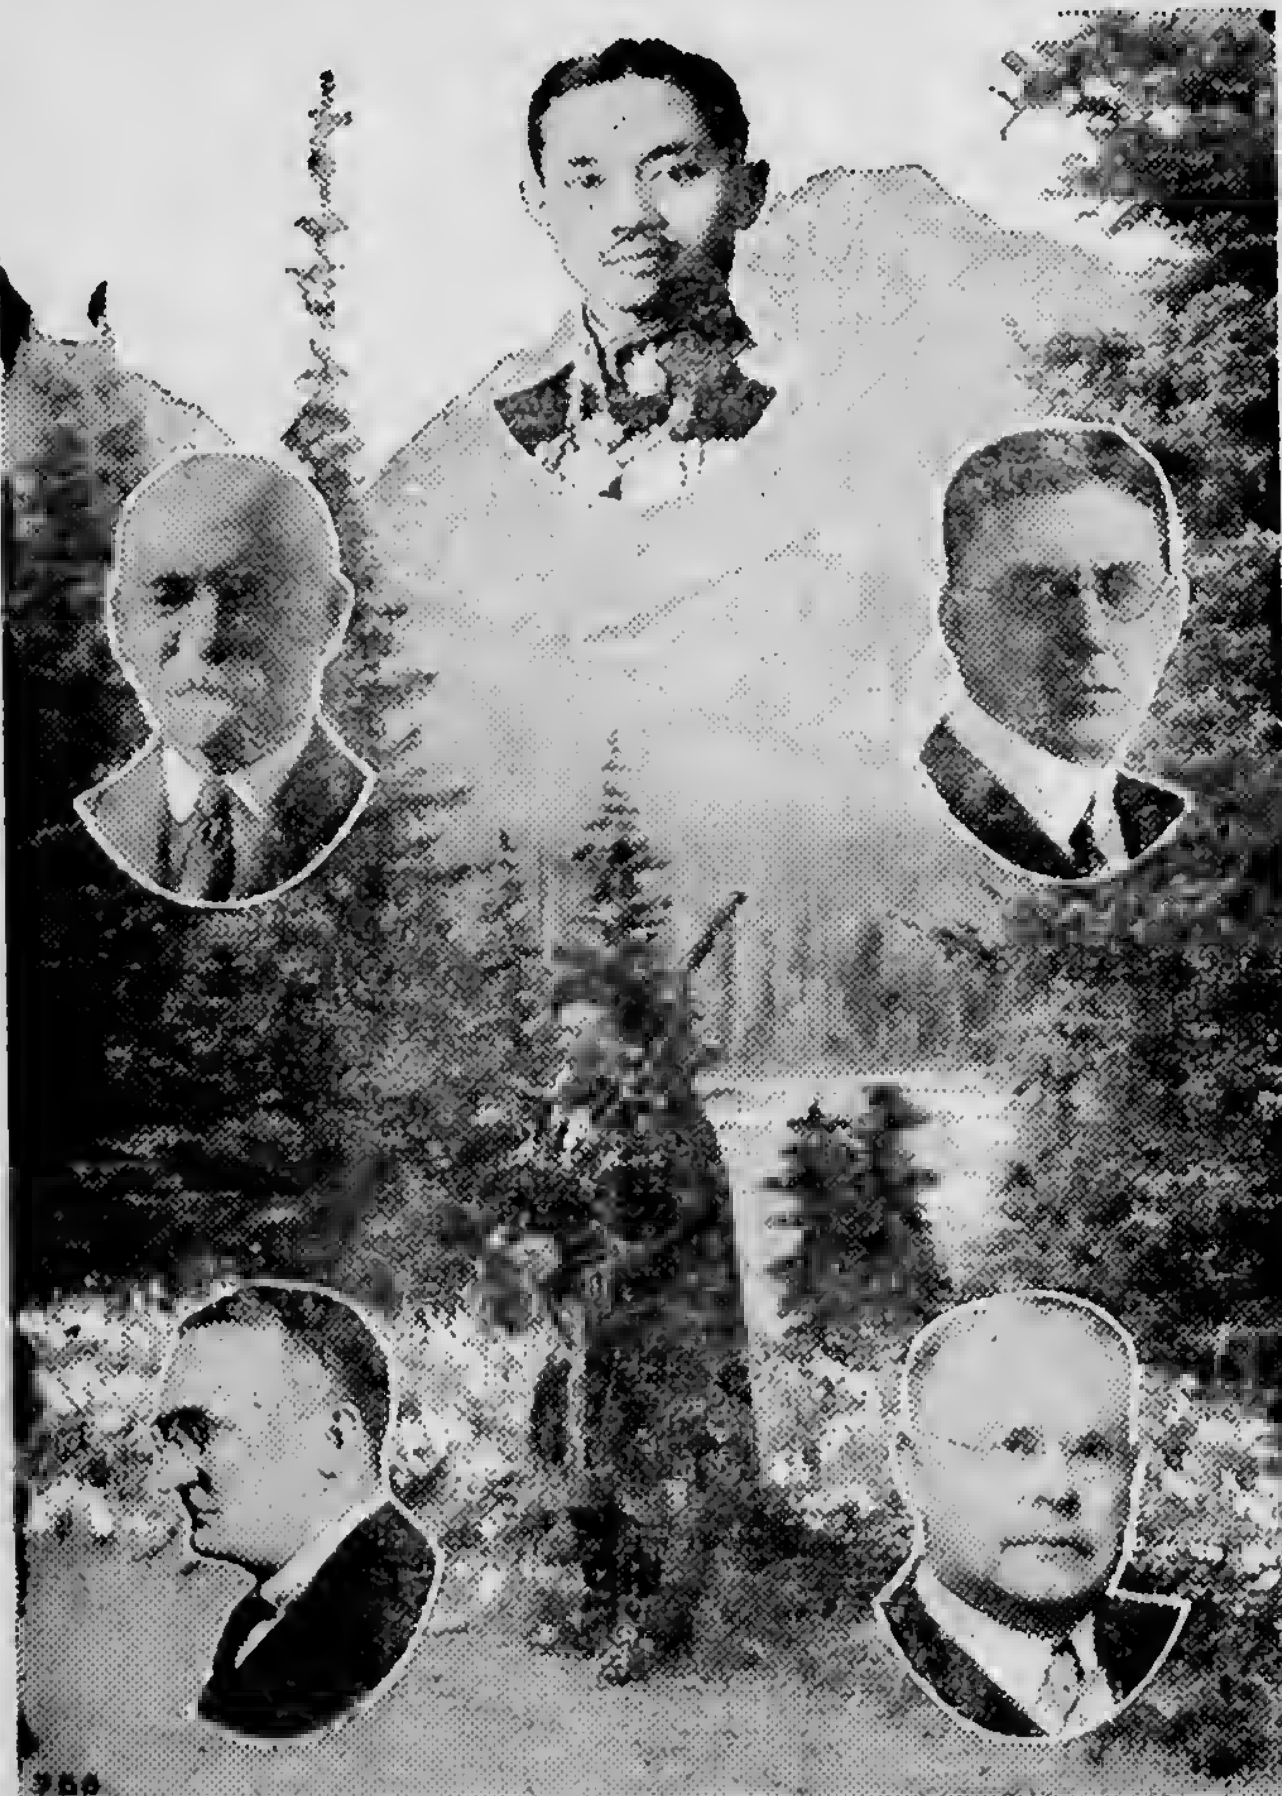

The fundamental principles are that every able bodied man willing to work will get work and be paid for it. Those who are physically unable to work and need relief will receive it directly. Those able to work but declining what is offered them, will not be afforded aid from the public treasury, and finally, those who seek to exploit the unrest by attacking the established institutions will be dealt with summarily.

Road Work Big Objective

Details of the methods proposed in applying these principles were learned today. One outstanding fact is that, if the provinces which are to select the route, are willing to go in on it, fifty-fifty, the coming year will see the trans-Canada highway well advanced.

The roadway works to be carried out in many places this winter will be in contemplation of this great undertaking though as stated the provinces must initiate it and agree to pay half. The Dominion Government as a further contribution is ready to pay one-half of the cost of maintenance of the highway. The system now reaches from Sydney, N.S., to North Bay, Ont. There is the gap around the lakes to Port Arthur and then, through the Rockies, via Jasper. The winter highway work of the Ontario government will largely be on the national highway, while the section through the Rockies is being developed by the Alberta and British Columbia governments.

Princes, Governors and Premiers

The three Lieutenant-Governors of the Prairie Provinces and the Premier of Alberta have officially notified their acceptance of invitation to attend the Annual Highland Gathering and Scottish Festival to be held at Banff, Alberta, under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Railway, from August 27 to 30. They are Mr. Justice W. L. Walsh, Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta; His Honor James Duncan McGregor, Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba; Lt.-Col. H. E. Munroe, Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan; and Hon. J. E. Brownlee, Premier of Alberta. These acceptances, added to the fact that H.R.H. Prince Sukhodaya, of Siam, will formally open the Gathering, will make the event one of the most brilliant of recent years. A feature of the programme this year will be the inter-regimental piping competition between representatives of the seventeen Highland Regiments in Canada and there will also be the other bagpipe contests and displays, as well as dancing and Highland Games. The Gathering is placed in one of the finest scenic settings in the world, the beautiful Valley of the Bow River, encircled by mountains, and having, as the centre of hospitality, the famous Banff Springs Hotel built in Scotch baronial style, fitting in ideally with the general scheme of the Festival. Lay-out shows, left to right, top, the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta; H. R. H. Prince Sukhodaya, of Siam; the Premier of Alberta. Lower left to right, the Lieutenant-Governors of Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Wee-Ya-Tee-Quah-Payo—The Pale-Face Chief

Forty years ago, by the winding banks of the Moose Jaw river in Saskatchewan, Black Bull, chief of a mighty tribe of warriors, sat in front of his tepee. Sprawled on the ground at his feet was a small pale-face boy, whose home was in a nearby settlement. He listened attentively to stories of buffalo hunting and tribal wars. Black Bull liked this little fellow. "Some day, little pale-face, you will belong to my race," said the old Indian chief.

So it came to pass that only a few days ago this little chap, now grown to manhood, stood before the descendants of Black Bull, not far from the creek in which he splashed as a lad. The sun went down in the west like a ball of fire and to the chant of the red-men and the muffled sounds of tom-toms, he was admitted to the council of the Crees, a member of the ancient tribe—an Indian chief.

With all the colorful ceremony of Indian initiation he was given the name of Chief Wee-Ya-Tee-Quah-Payo. Chief John Piapot and Chief Achim Piapot, rugged of face, regal in mien, stood on either side of their pale-face brother. The Indian women and ancient warriors, sitting in a large circle, granted their approval as the green blanket of office was placed about his shoulders and the large head-dress of a chief placed upon his head.

The newly created chief was Mr. A. E. Whitmore, president of the Regina Exhibition Association, vice-chairman of the executive and finance committee of the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina in 1932 and prominent western business man. Chief John Piapot called upon his Indian brothers and the huge crowd attending the ceremony to witness that Chief Wee-Ya-Tee-Quah-Payo (or "Smiling Face") was being thus honored because of his outstanding efforts in the development of the land which once was the home of the Cree and the Sioux and of the buffalo. "Him do much for us," said Chief Piapot in his native language. "Him big chief of Exhibition. Him big chief of Exhibition many moons soon," referring to the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference at Regina next year.

The official interpreter then proceeded to tell how Chief Piapot wanted all to know that the Indians, hundreds of whom are now engaged in the peaceful occupation of agriculture on the prairies, were all getting ready to take part in next year's world-wide event at Regina and how many of them would be sending samples of their grain to be entered in the competitive classes. "The Indians are looking forward to this great exhibition next year," continued the interpreter. "Because they will meet their pale-face brothers from many countries at Regina. They are looking forward with great joy to seeing the son of the Great White Chief (H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, who it is hoped will officially open the 1932 exhibition and conference) and so they want to honor one of the men who has done so much to get the wonderful exhibition of next year ready."

Then came the turn of the new chief to speak. Without the slightest warning he spoke to the Indians in their own language. For a few seconds only his voice could be heard. The huge crowd in the grandstand sat in their seats hushed. Suddenly the Indians began to rock backward and forward, grunt and clap their hands as they realized that their new chief was indeed worthy of admission to their councils. As a boy he had learned the language of the Indians in his room with Black Bull, and now, as the new chief, he was able to converse with them to their complete understanding.

Chief Smiling Face thanked his brothers for the honor conferred upon him and told them that next year when from many lands hundreds of pale-face brothers would come to Regina the Crees and the Sioux would be called upon to greet them. And a little later, as the stars twinkled and the glow of the camp fire lit up the tepees, the new chief with the older men on either side of him, sat at his first council.

NINTH FORTNIGHTLY

CROP REPORT

(Issued by the Alberta Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, Aug. 22)

Wheat cutting is in progress at many points throughout the Province and will be general by the middle of next week according to telegraphic reports. South and southeast of Calgary and in the Peace River district, crops are more advanced and more cutting has been done than in the north-central and northern areas. The warm weather of the past ten days has been ideal for hastening maturity, but a continuation of this weather is necessary, particularly where wind damage and dry conditions of the past spring caused late germination.

Hail damage has been reported at a number of points during the past fortnight and damage from this cause is considerable. Frost has occurred in the Peace River district only. The extent of damage is not fully known but it is not likely to be serious. Losses as a result of rust and other plant diseases are very light.

Conditions remain unchanged in the east-central and southeastern area. Shortage of pasture and water for stock constitutes a serious problem in some districts. Fortunately feed is very abundant over the greater part of the Province and there will be an adequate supply. Much of the partially hulled crop is being cut for feed. Having been carried on under favorable conditions in the irrigated districts, and the second cutting of alfalfa is now in the stack. In those areas where rain has been a frequent occurrence progress has been slow and much of the hay has deteriorated in the stacks. Sugar beet yields will be better than those of last year, but may be said to be fairly satisfactory.

Alberta Wheat Pool members may pool any portion of their wheat or may sell any portion at current market prices. The choice is left with the individual.

Alberta Wheat Pool Elevators are operated under a public license and will handle any grain on an open market basis.

If a non-pool grower desires to pool all or any portion of his wheat he will be required to sign a Pool contract. This contract does not compel him to deliver all or any part of his wheat on pool basis. Its purpose is to lay down regulations under which the wheat is to be pooled.

See that your wheat is delivered to an Alberta Pool Elevator.
